Genevieve McCarthy Kelly gained extensive civil litigation experience directly from law school at the U.S. Department of Justice, where she led individual or class action cases in twenty different federal district courts, ten federal courts of appeals, and the U.S. Supreme Court. Her cases—many of which involved novel questions of administrative and constitutional law—have often resulted in precedential opinions and been reported in national news outlets.

Prior to joining Torridon, Genevieve served as Associate Deputy Director for Enforcement at the Department of Health and Human Services' Office for Civil Rights. There she oversaw enforcement matters related to race, color, national origin, disability, age, and sex discrimination, as well as religious freedom and privacy.

Before attending law school, Genevieve co-founded a college-prep high school that exclusively serves economically disadvantaged students.
