Ben Lindeman is a seasoned finance professional with an extensive background in both public and private market investing and a passion for innovation.

After earning his degree in finance from Virginia Tech, Ben launched his career at Morgan Stanley, where his primary focus was portfolio management and equity research. On the portfolio management side he oversaw and helped grow a book of over $3B+ and on the equity research side his primary focus was emerging technologies.

From there, he joined Fisher Brothers, a prominent, family-owned New York City based real estate development, investment, and management firm, founded in 1915, as managing director, and launched their alternative investment arm, Fisher Capital Investments, as managing partner. At Fisher Capital Investments, Ben developed various investment theses for the family outside of traditional real estate, mainly in the technology and consumer discretionary industries, where he would actively get involved in the companies, he was investing in via board seat or advisory role.

Ben is also a member of the National Italian American Foundation, and was an inaugural fellow of their DiLella Fellows Program, which aims to orient young professionals in the Italian political and economic system, and cultivate the next generation of leaders passionate about Italian culture.
